Course Description: World's Story 1 guides students in a trip around the world as they study history from creation to the Roman Empire. Students will see God's hand and redeeming love at work from the very beginning. They'll meet biblical patriarchs, judges, prophets, kings, and historical figures from Scripture (including Abraham, Joseph, David, and Esther), as well as other important characters from history like Hammurabi, Alexander the Great, and Julius Caesar. They will also study ancient civilizations spanning the whole globe, including the Sumerians, Egyptians, Babylonians, Chinese, Celts, Nubians, Nazca, Persians, Greeks, Romans, and more!

This curriculum has two parts: the student book and this teacher guide. Students will cover 28 chapters, 5 art studies, and 4 reviews in this year-long history course for grades 6–8. Each chapter is arranged so that there are six days' worth of work per chapter, though the course is completed on a normal five-day school schedule. The activity pages are an assortment of areas to write/draw/copy. There are also timeline prompts for each chapter, hands-on projects, written narration prompts, and several optional craft ideas.

Using This Teacher Guide

Features: The suggested weekly schedule enclosed has easy-to-manage lessons that guide the reading, worksheets, and all assessments. The pages of this guide are perforated and three-hole punched so materials are easy to tear out, hand out, grade, and store. Teachers are encouraged to adjust the schedule and materials needed in order to best work within their unique educational program.

Lesson Scheduling: Students are instructed to read the pages in their book and then complete the corresponding section provided by the teacher. Assessments that may include worksheets, activities, quizzes, and tests are given at regular intervals with space to record each grade. Space is provided on the weekly schedule for assignment dates, and flexibility in scheduling is encouraged. Teachers may adapt the scheduled days per each unique student situation. As the student completes each assignment, this can be marked with an “X” in the box.

Approximately 45–60 minutes per lesson, five days a week

Includes answer keys for activity sheets and reviews

Activity sheets for each chapter

Reviews are included to help reinforce learning and provide assessment opportunities.

Designed for grades 6 to 8 in a one-year history course

Introduction

“We see, then, that the children’s lessons should provide material for their mental growth, should exercise the several powers of their minds, should furnish them with fruitful ideas, and should afford them knowledge, really valuable for its own sake, accurate, and interesting, of the kind that the child may recall as a man with profit and pleasure.”

(Mason 1906, 177)

Welcome to World’s Story, Volume 1. I hope you enjoy your journey with me through the beginning part of our incredible history here on this earth. The history of the world should be learned by all people. As parents, it is our responsibility to our children to make sure that they understand history did not start with Christopher Columbus sailing the ocean blue in 1492. History is much older than that! The time period covered in this volume is the time my children like to call “Bible Times,” and, indeed, the Bible was my main source of information in the writing of this volume.

Charlotte Mason once said, “The indwelling of Christ is a thought particularly fit for the children, because their large faith does not stumble at the mystery, their imagination leaps readily to the marvel, that the King Himself should inhabit a little child’s heart” (Mason 1906, 352). God is alive. Not only is He alive now, but He has also always been so.

Studying world history through the worldview glasses of biblical accounts allows a child to see history for what it truly is: HStory.

My goal in writing this curriculum is to make an easy-to-use, comprehensive history resource for you to use, with little to no preparation and no necessary supplement beyond your Bible. (I would also encourage you to use it with your whole family at one time. If you are doing this study as a family, you may even choose to have a journal for each of the parents involved in the study.)

Getting Started

The basics:

Each chapter is covered over a six-day period, though the course follows a typical five-day school week.

There is considerable flexibility built into this schedule, but as a general rule, plan to spend the first two days for each chapter reading the student book and working on the material in the corresponding Introductory Page in the Teacher Guide.

The next two days (day 3 and 4) should then be spent working on the activity sheets for that chapter, one per day.

The following day (day 5) is devoted to the My Timeline! page for that chapter.

The final day (day 6) is designed for maximum flexibility. Students may either work on a Dig Deeper! research prompt for that chapter or use the prompts on the Dig Deeper page as a suggestion for Further Reading but without completing a report on the topic. As an alternative, students can do one of the crafts in the back or they can use this day to catch up if behind or to review material in advance of the regularly scheduled reviews.

Reading assignments:

The scheduled reading for the student book may seem light, but one thing to keep in mind is that most chapters have Scripture references, indicated by a symbol depicting a Bible and cross. Please do not skip these. These references supply biblical backing for the events presented in this book. Please keep a Bible on hand and take the time for these important readings. Some chapters will be heavier in Bible reading assignments than others. These assignments are often about a chapter in length but can range from a few verses to a few chapters.

While reading, we encourage students to continue the concept of Art Studies (discussed more in-depth below) with the artwork in the student book as they read. The student book features many gorgeous paintings from various time periods and countries. It is important for students to understand that these are depictions of famous people, places, and events, but they are usually rooted in the individual artist's own mental image and often reflect more about the time in which they were created than the time they are depicting. Encourage students to analyze the artwork they encounter in the student text.

Included in this teacher guide:

An Introductory Page starts each chapter in the teacher guide. They are included on the schedule for both the first and second days devoted to each week. Feel free to divide the work between the two days after the assigned reading in the student book has been completed or to do the activities on the Introductory Page on the second day after spending the first day reading the entire chapter. This page includes:

- ✓ Any notes to the teacher about the content or instruction
- ✓ Objectives to note the most important concepts and content of the chapter
- ✓ Supply lists for needed items
- ✓ Answers or insight for chapter narration prompts. These prompts are found in the chapter narration breaks of the student book.

- Oral narration is an important component of the course and is regularly scheduled twice per chapter. Whether the student completes the reading in one day or over two days, please take the time to complete these assignments every time they are noted.
- Oral narration creates a dialogue about the reading material and helps students learn to develop the skill of mentally arranging their thoughts and giving coherent answers. It also provides a wonderful, regular review session.

Written narration prompts are also included and are an important component of the course. These should be completed after all the reading for the chapter has been finished.

- ✓ Students should start transitioning to writing their responses to narration prompts after they have mastered oral narration. Please give the student adequate time to ease into this transition. I suggest making this transition around age ten or so, though each student will be different.
- ✓ For grading, I suggest not correcting them on spelling, punctuation, or form. Simply let them put their thoughts on their paper and focus more on the content of their responses. It may take several years for their grammar, punctuation, and spelling skills to catch up. Please be patient with them; simple and sincere encouragement goes a long way!
- ✓ For students who are not yet ready to do writing narration prompts, allow students to respond orally before gradually transitioning them to writing short answers.
- ✓ This prompt would also work well as a general discussion question if you are teaching multiple students.

Vocabulary directions provide students with the opportunity for an individualized approach to studying vocabulary.

- ✓ Students are encouraged to look up words they don't know, to keep a record of these words, and to write down their meanings. This activity can be done during the reading time or immediately after.
- ✓ It is also a good idea to review vocabulary words from past weeks regularly at this time.

World Quest, Activity Sheet 1, provides students with a range of activities to check their comprehension and increase their understanding of the material they have learned. These are the first activity sheets that occur immediately after every Introductory Page and should be completed after the student has read the entire chapter.

- ✓ The front side of these activity sheets always ask students three general comprehension questions about what they have read in the chapter.
 - These questions go beyond basic “who”/“what” questions to focus more on “how”/“why” concerning historical events and figures.
 - Students should be able to answer each question with a short (two or three sentence) response. However, if the student is struggling with writing, some or all the questions could very easily be answered orally while students gradually build up to providing written responses for them all.
- ✓ The back side of these activity sheets include a variety of activities, including the following:
 - Copywork: Students will regularly be copying verses from the Bible that connect to what they have studied. Use whichever Bible translation you prefer for the assignment.
 - Sketching: Students will periodically have the chance to either sketch a historical figure or a sequence of events from their readings. As a general rule, they are not provided with a reference picture as a guide.

- Other activities: Students also occasionally work on other types of assignments, including answering critical thinking questions, filling in charts, responding to creative writing prompts, working on matching activities, reading short additional excerpts, and learning more about other alphabets, among other assignments

Map Adventure, Activity Sheet 2, includes map questions and a variety of other assignments. They are always placed after the first activity sheet in the Teacher Guide and should be completed after reading the entire chapter in the student book.

- ✓ The front side of these activity sheets are always focused on the map for the chapter that is found in the student book and repeats the questions located in the student book, as well.
 - The first question is always an “analysis” question designed to encourage students to study maps more critically.
 - The second question is always a “connect” question that encourages students to make connections with the material they have been reading. They are especially intended for students to make connections between various ancient civilizations and/or between the past and the present.
 - Because of the consistent focus on geography throughout the course, it is recommended to have a globe, atlas, or map on hand so that students can find the locations mentioned in the student book.
 - It is also helpful to include simple map-reading skills into any activity involving maps and geography. Just asking questions like “What continent is _____ on?” or “What hemisphere is _____ in?” helps familiarize students with geographical terms.
- ✓ The back side of these activity sheets also feature a variety of assignments for students. They tend to be more “hands-on,” though that is not always the case.
 - Create-your-own: Students periodically have opportunities to engage in creative activities and crafts connected to their reading in the student book. These include activities like devising their own cuneiform, making their own paper pyramid, writing their own law code, and planning their own ancient city.
 - Other activities: Students also work on other activities, such as reading short excerpts, answering critical thinking questions, sketching historical figures or events, responding to creative writing prompts, and more.

My Timeline! is a timeline activity page included for each chapter. Students will work on making their own timelines, as well as analyzing timelines to develop their own understanding of when historical events occurred in relation to each other. This assists students in understanding the connections between the various historical figures and events they study throughout the course.

- Most of the timeline pages require students to study a timeline, add some events to it, and then answer questions about the timeline.
- The questions sometimes involve calculating the span of time between events. Students may need to be reminded or taught that calculating B.C. events requires subtraction.
- Other questions ask students to identify events that were happening around the same time period while others require students to analyze the timeline and answer critical thinking questions.
- Some of the timelines are more creative, including occasional family trees for biblical figures and a multi-week timeline project on the life of Jesus.

- The timeline pages, once completed, serve as excellent references and should be kept through the duration of the course.
- Biblical scholars disagree on the exact dating of many biblical events. James Ussher's Annals of the World is used as the basis for dates in the timeline page and throughout the course, especially biblical ones, as much as possible. He was a 17th-century clergyman and chronologist whose work is still well-respected and widely used by scholars. His timeline is from a Young Earth creationist perspective and is firmly rooted in a biblical worldview.
- The dating and classification of Egyptian time periods and pharaoh dynasties are from John Ashton's and David Down's Unwrapping the Pharaohs.
- If students are especially motivated to complete their own chronological timeline of the events on a poster board or in some other manner, they are welcome to do so. However, there are no provisions for this in the Teacher Guide.

Dig Deeper research prompts: Every chapter includes five ideas for additional study, as well as suggestions for how students can then present their findings.

- These assignments are designed to guide students as they learn how to research. Having good research skills is essential for students as they progress through life and school. The Dig Deeper prompts help students gain these skills while also making learning how to research fun and manageable.
- Students should not complete one of these for every chapter. Instead, they should try to do two a month. The schedule for doing that is left to the discretion of the teacher. It could be altered every other week or students could pick the ones that interest them twice a month with no set schedule. Some of the prompts are intended to cross over multiple weeks.
- If two research prompts a month are too much for the student, consider having them do only one or stretching the assignments out over more than a week to provide students with more time.
- Because students this age are still learning how to research, we suggest that teachers research alongside them or provide them with prescreened material so that they do not feel overwhelmed or accidentally encounter inappropriate content.
- Research sources can include encyclopedias, books around the house, library books, and/or online websites. Please use discretion in allowing students to use computers. It is recommended that teachers either find and bookmark appropriate websites or require students to use a safe search browser. You may also wish to prescreen material from books.
- Most of the prompts require students to either submit a short written report or deliver a brief oral presentation of what they have learned. It is recommended that students switch between written reports and oral presentations so that they develop familiarity with both.
- For this age, the written reports do not need to be longer than one paragraph or one page. The oral presentations do not need to be longer than five minutes. A template provided in the back is optional but provides general guidance on how to structure the reports, whether they are written or oral. Copies will need to be made of the template to provide enough if one is used for each presentation.
- Many of the topics also have additional optional requirements or require other demonstrations of learning in place of reports. These include artwork, acting out scenes, and even cooking with the teacher's permission and supervision. Encourage students to be creative, but also do not feel like these suggestions are mandatory.

- Feel free to adapt the topics or create your own prompts. Above all, encourage students to research what interests them! Research assignments work much better when the student is actively engaged and genuinely wants to know more.
- These prompts could also work as general Further Reading guidelines. Students could easily read more on one or more of the suggested topics without being expected to produce a report.

Answer keys for the activity sheets and reviews.

Art Studies: Art studies occur regularly in the course, after chapters 5, 10, 15, 20, and 25. Because of the nature of ancient art, students will be studying specific art forms rather than specific artists. The reason is simply that the identity of many early artists is unknown. (In later volumes of this series, students will focus on specific artists.) These Art Study features are designed for flexibility. Students will read about a specific art form or style or technique and then look at examples. There are a range of suggested activities for each Art Study. Students may perform one or all of them.

- ✓ Journal prompts are assignments that students can respond to orally or in writing. These questions ask students to think broadly about the role the art played on society and why it was popular.
- ✓ Art assessments guide the student in thinking critically about the art examples that are shown and are more focused on the images of the artworks.
- ✓ Try it! gives students the opportunity to do a craft connected to the art technique or style that is discussed.

Review Sheets: Reviews are regularly scheduled every 7 chapters, occurring after chapters 7, 14, 21, and 28. There is no comprehensive final review. Reviews can be used as more formal assessments like a test or they can be ungraded. They are designed to assess student comprehension but also to ensure that students are making connections between the various historical events and ancient civilizations they are studying and between the ancient world and modern times.

- ✓ The first section of each review features three broad questions that are designed to encourage students to think critically and make connections between the various topics they have been studying over the course of several chapters.
 - Students should be able respond to each question with a few sentences. However, the reviews could easily be adapted to where students who struggle with writing answer all or part of the questions orally.
- ✓ The second section is a component unique to World's Story. It is an artifact study. This aspect of the reviews is also designed to encourage critical thinking and provides students with the opportunity to make connections concerning the material they have been studying.
 - Students are provided with images of ancient artifacts, as well as a short write-up explaining the artifacts. Students must then answer some questions about what the artifacts show about the ancient culture they come from.
 - Students will not have studied the specific artifacts being shown, but the questions they are answering are not about the artifacts. The questions are an opportunity for students to demonstrate their ability to make connections with the material they have learned about those ancient civilizations. In many ways, this component builds on the Art Studies and the skills students develop in analysis and making connections.

- Because this assignment is unique, some students might initially find it confusing or even intimidating because it is unfamiliar.
- There are several ways to guide students with this assignment so that students enjoy the artifact studies and do well on the assignment. We suggest considering grading the first artifact study lighter than would ordinarily be graded or not grading the first one. (A suggested rubric is provided in the back.) Alternately, since three artifact studies are provided for each review, consider allowing students to practice on one before the review and then grade them on the remaining two.
- The artifact study would also work well as a fun, engaging opportunity to review material. If used in this way, the artifact studies would be an ungraded assignment presented before students answer the other questions on the review sheet.

Timeline Overviews: These supplements are helpful overviews of the ancient world and include dates from both biblical and secular history. One looks at all major civilizations while the other focuses specifically on ancient Egyptian dynasties.

Craft Suggestions: In the back of the book, a range of craft suggestions are provided. These are optional and do not appear for every chapter.

Project Pages: Some of the projects students complete in activity pages or on the timeline pages are found in the back of the book due to space.

Recommended Resources: These resources are, of course, optional but are highly recommended as reference and research sources for the time periods covered in the curriculum.

Research Aids: These worksheets are optional but can be used to help students organize their research for reports and presentations throughout the year. You will want to plan approximately how many formal reports and presentations the student will do during the year and make enough copies of the template.

Suggested Grading Rubric: This aid is a suggested grading rubric for the reviews and artifact studies but can be used for evaluating any of the questions that require a written short answer or essay response.

Bibliography: Books and articles cited in the Teacher Guide. There is a separate Bibliography in the student book for books and articles cited there.

Teaching Tips for Struggling Learners

- Look through this book and the student textbook and decide which material is the most important for your student to learn permanently. Before you even start the program with your students, write those chosen concepts on index cards. As you go through the course use them to review.
- Connect all new information to something familiar. It is easier for any of us to permanently remember something when we have something familiar to tie it to. Teach your student mnemonic devices.
- Hands-on activities! Most children remember better the more senses they use. Just hearing it is not enough for most of us; we need to write about it, see it, and create it.
- Review often! Spend the entire week really getting into the story. Take time to plan crafts, skits, and anything else you can think of that will cement the story for your students. All children benefit from review. (Adults do too!) Ideas are included in the special projects section of this teacher guide.

- Encouragement — something so simple but so profound. Words of encouragement are always remembered.
- For most students who struggle, repetition is the key. The more times they hear it, the more likely they will be to remember it. Don't be afraid to re-read a chapter as a bedtime story. Or, if students can read on their own, let them re-read it. As they read, they can point out words they may not know.
- Show the students how the story relates to them. Talk about how they can apply it to themselves.
- Last, but most certainly NOT least, pray with your students. Teach them to pray for understanding and the ability to learn. Let them see you praying for them.

Using with Multiple Ages

This series is written for grades 6–8. However, if you are teaching a range of ages or abilities at the same time, it can be adapted to your needs. For children of all ages and levels, they should be reading the chapter or, if they are younger, listening to the chapter being read aloud. Likewise, they will need to either read or listen to the assigned Bible passages.

The work within the Teacher Guide can also be adapted, with younger children responding orally rather than in writing to many of the questions and narration prompts. Do keep in mind that some of the questions, especially those on the map and timeline pages, may require more critical thinking skills than younger children currently have developed. Younger students should be able to participate in most of the drawing or hands-on activities, as well.

Older students will be doing most of their work independently. They should be reading the chapter and doing the work in the student activity sheets. They should especially be encouraged to do more of the research assignments and to do more in-depth research than would be expected for a junior high student.

Citation note:

Chicago author-date citation has been used throughout this book and the student book. This style was chosen primarily so that citing sources used in the student book would not interrupt the flow of the narrative with endnotes or footnotes.
