

America

My country, 'tis of thee,
Sweet land of liberty,
Of thee I sing;
Land where my fathers died,
Land of the Pilgrims' pride,
From every mountain-side
Let Freedom ring.

“America” by Samuel Francis Smith, (1808-1895)

Day 1

- a. Listen as your teacher reads this poem to you. After your teacher reads it aloud a second time, look over the poem and list any words that are unfamiliar to you.

Look up the unfamiliar words in the dictionary, and write the definitions using your own words on a separate sheet of paper. After making sure you know the meaning of all the words, read this poem aloud to your teacher.

- b. List four to six words that you should study for spelling this week, or use the following list of suggested words: country, died, mountain, liberty, again, freedom.

Spelling Tip
 Words like mountain are spelled with ain
 to make an /en/ sound.

Copy the following words and underline ain. Say the words aloud as you write them.

- | | | | |
|----------|-------|---------|-------|
| fountain | _____ | captain | _____ |
| bargain | _____ | again | _____ |
| curtain | _____ | certain | _____ |

- c. This poem describes America in three ways. The descriptions are easy to find because they each include the word land. In the passage find and circle these three descriptions.
- d. All of these descriptions talk about our heritage, or history. Talk with your teacher regarding our history.
- e. Write a list of ways we remember our beginnings as a nation and the people who have worked to help establish our country. A list does not have to be complete sentences.

Day 2

- a. Words can be broken down into syllables. A syllable consists of one of the following:

a vowel sound

example: (a in a/bout)

a vowel sound with consonant sounds before it example: (fa in fa/thers)

a vowel sound with consonant sounds after it example: (er in lib/er/ty)

a vowel sound with consonant sounds surrounding it example: (dom in Free/dom)

The key to finding syllables is to look for vowel sounds and determine what, if any, consonant sounds go with them. If you are unsure how to divide a word into syllables, look in your dictionary.

Accented syllables are spoken with more stress than unaccented syllables. When we say chicken, the syllable chick is stressed or accented, but the en is soft. Therefore, the accent is on chick. chick ěn

b. Look at the sample dictionary page. A dictionary gives you the following helpful information:

|-------------------------|----------------------------------------------|
| 1) definition | 4) part of speech |
| 2) syllabication | 5) Some dictionaries give a sample sentence. |
| 3) pronunciation/accent | |

scorpion secret

scorpion (skôr' pe en), noun: an arachnid with a poisonous sting While cleaning the basement, the man was stung by a scorpion.

scout (skout), noun: one who is sent to spy
The scout reported back to his commander.
verb: to hunt to find something Dad told me to scout for worms.

scream (skrem), verb: to make a loud piercing cry
I will scream for help.
noun: a loud piercing cry
The scream was heard throughout the neighborhood.

sea(se), noun: a body of salt water.
The tourists sailed over the calm sea.

secret (sé' krit), noun: knowledge kept unknown
She whispered a secret to her friend.
adjective: kept from being known
The boys found a secret passageway.

c. Look at each line of the first verse of “America,” by Samuel Francis Smith. First, count the number of syllables in each line. Next, mark the syllables accented or unaccented. Do you see a pattern? This pattern of accented and unaccented syllables is called meter.

- d. Read the verse again, using the marks as your pronunciation guide.
- e. Enrichment

Write the shortest word you know: _____

Write the longest word you know: _____

List three words you would find in the beginning of a dictionary.

List three words you would find in the middle of a dictionary.

List three words you would find in the end of a dictionary.

Day 3

- a. Look at the first line of “America.” Can you find the word that names a person, place, thing, or idea?

Ex: mailman - person library - place chair - thing anger - idea

- b. Write two nouns each for the following:

1) person _____

2) place _____

3) thing _____

- c. Words that name an idea are probably the hardest nouns to recognize. The word joy is a noun. Some other nouns which express an idea are war, flight, courage, etc.
- d. Write two nouns which express an idea.

- e. Can you find three more nouns in “America” which name an idea?

- f. Look at the second, fourth, and seventh lines of the literature passage and list all the nouns.

- g. Look at line one of “America,” To whom does the word my refer?

Look at line three. To whom does the word I refer? Now, look at line four. To whom does the word my refer?

- h. Look at the following sentence:

John made John's bed and ran downstairs. John ate breakfast and fed John's dog.

Does it sound funny? Rewrite the sentences above replacing the italicized words with the correct pronoun. Look at the Personal Pronoun Chart in 3j if you need help.

- i. Now, try replacing the italicized words with pronouns in these sentences:

1) Ron and Sandy fixed Ron and Sandy's bikes.

2) Alan waited for Ron and Sandy.

3) Ron and Sandy raced to the comer.

4) Alan got on Alan's bike to meet them.

5) Alan was glad to see them.

- j. Review your spelling words.

PERSONAL PRONOUNS
Singular
Subjective	Possessive	Objective
I	my, mine	me
you	your, yours	you
he, she, it	his, her, hers, its	it, him, her
Plural
Subjective	Possessive	Objective
we	our, ours	us
you	your, yours	you
they	their, theirs	them

Day 4

- a. Read the excerpt from the book Patriotic Songs, part of the Color the Classics series.

The Story of “America”
(My Country, ‘Tis of Thee)
 Samuel Francis Smith, 1808-1895

Samuel Francis Smith was born in Boston, Massachusetts on October 21, 1808. He was an only child who developed a fascination with the patriotic history of our country.

One spring morning in 1815, the pastor of Christ Church began his sermon discussing the events of Paul Revere’s ride to Lexington. Samuel often daydreamed about that heroic horse ride. He wondered what it would have been like to have traveled all those miles through the middle of the night. How did the British find out about Lexington? What was Paul Revere thinking as he crossed the Charles River? How fast was he riding? How long did it take him to get all the way to Lexington? Would he be caught? Would he ever see his family again? Oh, how Samuel wished he could have been there!

One day while waiting for his school friends, he happened to see the church maintenance man, Mr. Perry, sweeping the steps of Christ Church. Samuel asked him if he saw Paul Revere anymore. Perry mentioned that Paul was quite old now and that only his son, Joseph Revere, came to church. They sat and talked about the event that followed the hanging of the two lanterns. Perry described how Paul had to sneak past the British warship, the Somerset, in the channel and mount the horse that was waiting for him on the other side. Then Mr. Perry pulled out a set of old keys and said, “Come with me.” Curiously, the boy followed the custodian up the stairs to the belfry. After opening the door, The two stood there looking at two old lanterns. One was broken. Samuel’s eyes could not have widened any bigger. “Are these ... ?” “Yes,” said Mr. Perry, “they certainly are!”

Samuel's father had one dream for his only son. He wanted Samuel to attend Harvard University and receive a great education. Harvard was founded by men from England's University of Oxford and University of Cambridge. These Puritan men and their families believed that England's Universities were corrupt. Their intent was to establish a University in America with moral character, dependence upon Scriptural principles and high academic standards. For many years Mr. Smith worked hard to make sure his son could attend that University. Eventually, his long hours as a cooper took their toll. When Samuel was 15, his father died unexpectedly. It was time to take care of his mother and fulfill his father's dream. Within a short time, Samuel was studying diligently at Harvard where he made many friends. Oliver Wendell Holmes and Lowell Mason were among his closest lifelong friends. Samuel quickly earned a reputation as a linguist and a writer. He translated and wrote for many newspapers and journals. Because he studied all day and all night, he eventually mastered Latin, Greek, German, as well as 11 other languages.

He graduated from Harvard in 1829. Samuel was asked by many what he was going to do with his life after college. He considered law, medicine, teaching, and translating. After much prayer, he decided to enroll in Andover Theological Seminary to become a pastor.

In February of 1831, his first year at Andover, 24 year-old Samuel heard a loud knock on his door. There stood Lowell Mason, a popular musician, with an arm full of books. Lowell, who did not understand German, asked Smith to translate the music books from German to English. Lowell was looking for an appropriate piece of music that he could use with the children for the upcoming 4th of July celebration five months away. Samuel accepted the task and Lowell left.

Samuel came across a piece of music that instantly grabbed his attention. He took a scrap of paper from the wastepaper basket and quickly jotted down five stanzas in 30 minutes. Thinking he had better continue with the work that Lowell had just left him, he placed the wastepaper in one of the books and forgot all about it. Little did he realize that the words he adapted to the tune would become a national hymn and that the tune would be shared by both England (God Save the King) and America.

On July 4th of that same year, Samuel walked down to the annual celebration given by the children of the community. What a shock to see the children stand up, follow the music leader, Lowell Mason, and sing the five verses that he had completely forgotten. "My verses," he exclaimed. After the performance was over, the applause was overwhelming. Even more thrilling was the young woman, Mary White, who came up to congratulate him for such a beautiful poem. She later became Mrs. Samuel Smith.

Samuel preached in several large Baptist churches for many years. He composed over 150 hymns during his lifetime. Samuel always had a love for missions; he strongly promoted them. One of his sons became a missionary to Burma. When all his children were grown, he and Mary visited many countries as missionaries.

Annual Celebrations: Lowell wanted Smith to pick a melody from the collection of books and translate the German into English for the children's celebration. It was performed in Boston on July 4, 1831 at the Park Street Church. Smith did not know he was using "God Save the King." He was later accused of being pro-British. It became so popular that the tune was sung at patriotic rallies, schools and during the Civil War. One reason for its success was because people already knew the tune. There were originally five stanzas but the last one was dropped because of its anti-British sentiment. The present four stanzas are exactly the way he wrote them. No revisions. The song was translated into Swedish, Latin, Italian and German. Once it became popular with the Americans, Samuel commented, "If only I had known that my song would be so well liked, I would have taken greater pains with it."

Answer the following questions.

1) Why do you think Samuel Francis Smith was interested in the ride of Paul Revere?

2) Where did Samuel go to college? What did he decide to do after college?

3) When did Samuel write "America?" When was it first performed?

b. Optional: Take an oral or written spelling pretest.

Day 5

a. Begin memorizing "America."

Tips for Memorizing Poetry

1. Read your poem silently.
2. Reread the first three lines, either silently or out loud.
3. Read the first three lines again out loud.
4. Now look away, or close your eyes, and repeat the first three lines.
5. If you get stuck, open your eyes, find the word you need and then go on to the end of those three lines.
6. Keep doing this until you feel sure you know them.

b. When you have the poem memorized, say it for your family or class.

c. Take a spelling test.

d. Optional: Choose skills from the Review Activities.

e. Enrichment

Fill in the blanks with a noun that fits the verb.

Example: a baby cries
